

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My interest into the postcolonial studies was initiated by Dr. C. J. Davees, Associate Professor, Department of English, St. Thomas' College, Thrissur, under whose guidance I pursued my research for the Degree of MPhil at the University of Madras. He directed my attention to discover a splendid field of postcolonial critical theories and literature that might otherwise have escaped my notice. His inspiration has gone deep into me to seriously consider postcolonial theories and literature as a field of my doctoral study. I, hereby, would like to convey the depth of my gratitude to my research supervisor and mentor, Dr. C. J. Davees, for providing me with a theoretical foundation for my scholarship and for the helpful comments and critical suggestions throughout my doctoral research.

A number of professors at the Department of English have had a crucial influence upon my PhD programme. Of particular note are Professor K.F. Sebastian, Head of the Department of English; Rev. Dr. Devassy Panthallookkaran, the former Principal of the College; and Dr. Bose Joseph, the former Head of the Department of English, without whose help I would not have been able to pursue my studies and research. I am deeply grateful to the members of the Doctoral Committee for their valuable suggestions and recommendations that allowed me to set my focus clearly. I place on record my sincere gratitude to Dr. P.O. Jenson, Principal, St. Thomas' College, Thrissur, for his support at every stage of my research. I also greatly express my gratitude to all my professors at the Department of English for laying the foundation of my knowledge and understanding about English literature and literary theories. I am also thankful to all my teachers who moulded me from my school days. I sincerely thank Mr. N. P.

Raphy, the librarian of the Department of English, for his patience and cooperation. My sincere sentiments of gratitude also go to the Principal and the members of Staff at St. Antony's H.S.S at Mala.

A number of friends outside of the department also deserve my heartfelt gratitude for their continued support, including Dr. Shinoj P.V., Dr. Nahid F. Sulaiman, Mr. K.A. Varghese, Mr. P.A. Babu, Mr. Viju M.J., Mr. Tom Thomas and Mrs. Priya Mohammad Ali.

I could not imagine writing this thesis without the wholehearted love and encouragement provided by my wife Ligy Jose and my kids Freddin V. Jose and Fiya Jose. Their generosity and continued support served to inspire me to strive towards the completion of my goals. I would also like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to my parents, brothers and sisters for their constant source of encouragement and prayers throughout my studies.
